

Capital Region of Denmark's Psychiatry Klintegården

Klintegården consists of 6 departments, where 6-8 residents live in each house. In addition, a housing unit with 21 more independent apartments. Klintegården is an offer of temporary long-term housing and activity for people with mental illness. The building was built around the year 1960 and is made of brick facades in yellow brick.

In connection with the roof replacement at Klintegården, Damgaard has prepared a note regarding the building's critical masonry.

In general, large parts of the buildings' masonry are damaged, especially facades located at the north end, where the condition must be described as very critical with direct access to the cavity wall.

There are two types of damage to the buildings, partly mortar joints which are porous and missing, as well as damage caused by bricks and joints due to intrusive moisture from the ground, which is generally raised so that 1-3 brick shifts are below the ground.

The damage has been repaired.
